FLOWERFUL WINS CONNAUGHT CUP HANDICAP AT BLUE BONNETS TRACK

FLOWERFUL IS WINNER

Seagram Stable's Filly Runs True to 1923 Form At Blue Bonnets

FIELD OF FIVE FACES BARRIER IN FEATURE

Connaught Cup Handicap Provides Sterling Race For Montreal Fans

MONTREAL, June 8.—The Seagram Stable's filly Flowerful, whom the history of the Blue Bonnets track in 1923, ran back to form today and led home the field of five starters which faced the barrier in the Connaught Cup Handicap at the Blue Bonnets track. The Seagram stable has won the race three times very inconsistently since her winning of the King's Plate last year, but in winning today she has definitely vindicated the sterling qualities which she exhibited in that first race.

The Winning Streak

The Commercial Grads disposed of a long-standing tradition of competition which will go to Paris with an unlikely record of victories that is remarkable. Whether their opponents there, visitors to the Olympic competitions will see some real basketball when the Edmonton team gets on the floor.

Paying Up Well

Tax collections at the city hall for the first five months of the year fell nearly $70,000 below the amount gathered in last year. The comparison, of course, is not fair unless the differing conditions are taken into account. The city has been compelled to pay early if they would avoid a penalty. This year taxes are being collected on the instalment plan, and the first instalment is not due until the end of the present month.

That so large a sum was paid before the time limit, and with nothing to gain by early payment, suggests that the conditions for the year will exceed those of the preceding one. While the final payments are not due until fall, there is a gratifying indication in the early receipts that the taxpayers are neither less able nor less willing than in former years to meet the demands, and good ground to hope that this year's receipts will come substantially nearer to the amount of the levy.

Not so Poor

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has been assessing the national wealth. According to its report, Canadians were worth $22,105,000,000 in 1921. More than a third of this wealth is credited to Ontario, less than a third to Quebec. Saskatchewan comes next with less than three billions, and Alberta fourth with not quite two billions. The average was more than $3,000 per head of population.

It does not follow that people were the richest in the provinces which had the greatest aggregate amount of wealth. Very much the contrary. The Yukon led all Canadian areas at an average of $3,930 per capita. Then followed Saskatchewan, $2,757; Alberta, $3,117; Manitoba, $2,705; British Columbia, $2,693; Ontario, $2,507; Quebec $2,347; New Brunswick $1,541; Nova Scotia $1,437; Prince Edward Island $1,353.

These figures have cleared up his calculations of the last year, but leave in the value of farm products and some other kinds of wealth since that time, but the influence of last year's remarkable crop must have reacted in the other direction. Making a liberal allowance for deflation, the figures show that Canadians are not nearly so hard up as they commonly suppose. A family of four with an income of $15,000 per family in Alberta does not denote any condition of general bankruptcy.

Must Look to Berlin

President Millerand finally succeeded in finding some one to undertake to form a Government acceptable to the coalition which was successful in the late general elections in France. That may end the deadlock; or it may only end the political aspirations of M. Poincaré. And the latter the case the resignation of the President is said to have been definitely announced.

While the situation grew directly out of the rejection by the French voters of the demands of the ministry of M. Poincaré, it is one in which the people who ranged themselves with France in the great war had a strong interest at stake. And in which the United States is particularly and almost directly concerned.

Since the war ended France has devoted the proceeds of taxation to the carrying on of its warlike policy and to the reconstruction of its war-torn areas. It has left to the future the question of paying its war obligations to its Allies, the United States being its chief creditor. The policy evidently was that France should pay its debts when Germany paid France.

This policy could not be continued indefinitely, however, because it resulted in a sharp fall in the value of the francs at New York and other centres. To redress French credit abroad, M. Poincaré proposed a program of retrenchment and new taxation. A sharp cut was to be made in expenditure, while taxes were to be raised twenty per cent.

The French voters revolted. They defeated the Government at the polls, and returned a coalition pledged to increase expenditure and keep down taxes. The inference is that the French public do not propose to pay their debts to the Allies and lake chances on the United States. And in which the United States is particularly and almost directly concerned.

The effect of the popular verdict seems to be that the creditors of France will have to look to Germany for payment. Whether that is a matter to excite the approval that was somewhat widely expressed in Britain on the downfall of Poincaré is rather to be doubted.

Berlin will hardly exert itself to pay reparations in order that France may clear off its debts and re-establish its credit abroad.

Opposition Leader Bereaved

Hon. J. R. Boyle and family will have the kind sympathy of thousands of people in all parts of the Province. The late Mrs. Boyle enjoyed an extended circle of acquaintance, by no means confined to this city in which her home has been for many years. She will be missed locally in a large number of women's organizations with which she has been actively associated.

The C.N.R. Management

Senator Taylor of New Westminster does not seem to be backed up by the business interests of British Columbia in the proposal he has raised in Parliament as to the management of the Canadian National Railways and the National Merchant Marine. The Timber Industries Council at Vancouver adopted a resolution declining that the business of both the railways and the shipping be turned over to the government by the governors of the states.

The men who framed the constitution of the United States in 1787 were soon discovered. The author is Mr. E. F. Benson's four-year-old son, and the one which perplexed them in their consideration of the method of electing a president. First and last they considered a dozen plans, including direct election by Congress, election by state legislatures, election by the governors of the states; but they could not agree on any of them. There was a difference of opinion and a vote on the subject.

The head of a large business house noticed that one of his clerks had been looking off course for some time. He asked him what he was doing. He looked rather pale than usual, he noted. "I've got to leave this morning," he said timidly. "If you murder me, you will be hanged." And he went away.

According to the Chicago Tribune, Timmy was soon discovered. The author is Mr. E. F. Benson's four-year-old son, and the one which perplexed them in their consideration of the method of electing a president. First and last they considered a dozen plans, including direct election by Congress, election by state legislatures, election by the governors of the states;
